

An MFA in Design at the University of California Davis offers a unique opportunity to pursue advanced studies in design. This two-year program encourages a contemporary, interdisciplinary approach with emphases on socially responsible, human-centered, and sustainable design practices. Graduates become leaders in design research, innovation, creative practice, and higher level education.

Design faculty expertise includes history/theory, exhibition, fashion, information, interaction, interior architecture, immersion, lighting, product, textiles, time-base, visual communication and wearables, among others.

Students can pursue a highly focused research agenda within a specific design discipline or can combine multiple interests exploring the interdisciplinary and the cross-disciplinary.

Application deadline January 5

arts.ucdavis.edu/design-graduate-program

Melany Miners

Graduate Program Coordinator
(530) 752-8710
mjminers@ucdavis.edu

Glenda Drew

Professor of Design
Design Graduate Program Chair
gadrew@ucdavis.edu